

Georgia N. Crump is a Principal with the Austin firm of Lloyd Gosselink Rochelle & Townsend, which has been consistently selected as one of the Best Places to Work in Austin and the State of Texas. Georgia graduated from Baylor University School of Law and received her undergraduate degree from Muhlenberg College in Allentown, Pennsylvania, and she also studied at the University of London. With a background as a City Attorney, she has continued to represent governmental entities and their interests while in private practice. She is currently the Chair of the Firm's Energy & Utility Practice Group. Her practice includes representation of clients at the Public Utility Commission of Texas and the Railroad Commission of Texas in electric and gas utility rate cases, and in all matters affecting water and wastewater utilities and rates. From the halcyon days of negotiating cable and telephone franchises on behalf of cities to the present, she stays actively involved in communications issues through the representation of public entities in matters affecting zoning, tower siting and leasing, broadband build-out and access, and right-of-way management.

Georgia is a long-standing member of the Texas City Attorneys Association, the International Municipal Lawyers Association, the National Association of Telecommunications Officers and Advisors, and the Texas Association of Telecommunications Officers and Advisors. She has been listed in Best Lawyers in America since 2011 and has received an AV peer review rating from Martindale-Hubbell for the past 25 years.

Georgia enjoys the great outdoors, and finds that it mixes well with live music.
